Check below the ear, and, of course, forward of it. The function of the glands is the secretion of saliva, and they are the largest of the salivary glands. Each is furnished with a tube or duct a little over two inches long, which opens on the inner part of the check, opposite the upper law. Each gland weights about one ounce. The other salivary apparatus is composed of the sub-maxillary glands, which lie, as their names indicate, the former ander the lower jaw and the latter under the lower jaw and the latter under the tongue. In protracted low fevers the parotid gland is frequently the sent of fevers, and sometimes even of abecs.
